Log Crib Wall Construction

Retaining walls constructed of native logs or treated lumber are often used to shore up trails damaged by landslides, tipped over root balls, or along stream banks. This class covers the basics of site preparation, material selection and construction of a small native log wall.